Upon arrival, meet the guide and embark on a splendid car ride to Deqin. Eight kilometers northwest you'll gaze the Napahai Lake, the largest wetland of Shangri-La. Move on and you'll traverse the northern slope of Baima Snow Mountain. The pristine forests here are among the most diverse ones on earth, providing a large array of species. Here hidden valleys harbor the greatest natural wealth and nurture unique creatures, among which is the lumpy, chunky Yunnan Snub-nosed Monkey (the Golden Monkey), endangered and found nowhere else on earth. Head on and you'll find a U-shaped river bend that separates Yunnan from Sichuan -- the Great Bend of the Jinsha River, flowing from the Meili Mountain Range, later goes on to form the mighty Yangtze, then making its way southwards to central Yunnan through parallel gorges. Pit-stop for a view of the Dongzhulin Temple, one of 13 great Lama temples in China. You'll also catch a glimpse of the formidable, remote, rugged Main Peak of the Baima Mountain. End today's ride after Feilai Temple Scenic Zone, till the town of Deqin, bordering Tibet Autonomous Region to the east, and Burma to the west. Although Deqin lies in Yunnan, it's decidedly Tibetan, about 3,000 meters above sea level.</li> </ul> Overnight at Guanjing Tiantang Hotel.
